

Date 14 December 2020
Location Pfaeffikon ZH / Herisau
Page 1 of 1

HUBER+SUHNER affected by attack on IT systems

The IT network of HUBER+SUHNER was the target of an attack with malware. The company immediately initiated security measures to prevent further damage. The investigations into the circumstances involving experts are running at full speed.

In the night from Sunday to Monday, 14 December 2020, the IT systems of HUBER+SUHNER became the target of a cyberattack. Internal monitoring services discovered that the IT network had been attacked by malware.

Immediately after the attack was detected, all workstations worldwide were deactivated by central IT in order to avert further possible damage. Because central systems are also affected, production has been interrupted in all plants worldwide.

The cooperation with the outsourcing partner for IT infrastructure and the involvement of further experts is running at full speed. It is not yet clear when and how quickly the systems can be restarted.

Investigations into the extent of the damage and intensive work to minimise the impact of the cyberattack are ongoing. The company will provide information as soon as new findings are available.

This media release can currently not be displayed on the HUBER+SUHNER website. This will be done as soon as the corresponding platform is online again.

Likewise, for technical reasons, it is unfortunately currently not possible to serve our registered recipients of push mails.

HUBER+SUHNER Group

HUBER+SUHNER, based in Switzerland, is a globally active developer and supplier of components and system solutions for electrical and optical connectivity. Through its production of cables, connectors and systems in the three key technologies of radio frequency, fiber optics and low frequency, the company serves three markets: Communications, Transportation and Industrial. Its products excel in terms of their excellent performance, quality, reliability and durability, even in challenging conditions. HUBER+SUHNER has a global production network and provides local customer support via branch offices and representatives in over 80 countries. For more information on the company, visit hubersuhner.com.

HUBER+SUHNER AG
CC Corporate Communications
8330 Pfaeffikon
Switzerland

Patrick G. Köppe
Head Corporate Communications
Phone +41 44 952 2560
pressoffice@hubersuhner.com